The sheriff has not yet gone to Winifred, but is in readiness to start with his deputies at any time. The splint coal operators of the Kanawha and New River districts met in this city to-day and decided to increase the price for mining to 214 cents per bushed, the price formerly paid. It is thought that this will cause the splint miners to resume, unless the soft coal men prevent them.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 4 .- At Kenova HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 4.—At Kenova, eight miles west, where the Norfolk and West-tern railroad crosses the Ohio river, many threats have been made regarding the destruction of one of the spans by strikers, who desired to stop the coal from coming out from the Pocaliontas mines. To-night every bridge along the road is guarded by an over-thelicing, force and supplicious desired. bridge along the road is guarded by an over-whelming force, and suspicious characters are not allowed to approach. Two local mit-tary companies have assembled, ready to pro-ceed to either Kenova or Winifred, as these are the points where striking miners have been gathering. Only strikers, esti-mated at from 1,000 to 2,000, are expected down from the Wellston district to-night to blow up the Norfolk and Western railway bridge. The railroad has about 100 guards stationed at the Ohlo river bridge alone, all armed with Winchesters, while the military companies are called in readiness for orders if needed. ELECTION IN OREGON.

Legislature Close, but Claimed by the Republicans.

PORTLAND, Oreg., June 4.—The most exciting election in the history of the state took place to-day, Lord (Republican) for Governor is undoubtedly elected by a large plurality. The entire Republican state ticket is elected, with the possible exception of Irwin for superintendent of schools.

The legislature will be very close, and the Populists may hold the balance of power in the Senare, though the Republicans claim they will have a majority in both Houses.

Herman (Rep.) is elected to Congress from the first distret, from 1,900 to 2,000 majority.

Ellis (Rep.) is in the read in the second district, but the greater part of the second district is cut off by the flood and no returns will be received for several days.

The warm affections of the prosperous outh were duly reciprocated and the couple spent many happy hours together. But they spent many happy hours together. But they had their quarrels, as all lovers will, and Sunday evening they had some slight difference on the way home from church. Emmet became mortally offended at some of the coquettish actions his young sweetheart. Rogers usually made a confidant of Emmet Cowans, a fellow waiter, and told him the ups and downs of his experience at courting, as Cowans had formerly been a lover of the same maiden and could give valuable sur-

Yesterday Rogers acted very peculiarly all through the day, but told none of his troubles. He went to his room at about 6 o'clock, hav-ing got excused from work early. Cowans, who rooms at the same house, followed an hour later.

when Cowans reached home he inquired of the inudiady, Mrs. Reed, in regard to Rogers. She informed him that Rogers had said he intended going home to Keswick, Va., about 11 o'clock, and had gone out, saying that he would never return to his friends again.

Cowans became very much worried over the actions of his friend, and shortly after dark went out to search for him. He naturally went in the direction of the house of Miss Williams, on P street, and there he found Rogers walking up and down the sidewalk in front of his sweetheart's house.

Cowans begged his friend to tell him his troubles and give him the reasons of his strange actions, but he would tell nothing.

"I cannot tell you now, but will let you know all about it to-morrow," was his reonse,

"Mrs. Reed said you were going to take the 11 o'clock train for Keswick to-night; aren't you going?" queried Cowans.

Rogers replied that he did not believe he would go. They then waiked together to their rooms. When they arrived Cowans' room-mate, J. H. Dickinson, was there. Dickinson is the head waiter at the Portland flats. The three talked together for an hour or more, and then Dickinson suggested that he would go out and get some beer and bring it to the room.

would go out and get some beer and bring it to the room.

"Wait, I'll go with you," said Rogers, and the two went out together, leaving Cowans alone. This was evidently a ruse of Rogers' not to be left alone with Cowans, as the conversation would then revert to his trouble.

Dickinson and Rogers soon returned, and in a few minutes R. gers expressed his intention of catching an early morning train for his home, and asked Dickinson to lend him his revolver to use while in the country. Dickinson got the pistol and some cartridges out of his trunk, cautioning Rogers not to load it until he got home.

Rogers promised to be careful, thanked Dickinson, and bid them both good night. He said in would return from the country in a few days. He then went to his own room

An Investigation To Be Had.

PRINCES ANNE, Md., June 4.-The state's attorney has decided to exhume and hold an inquest over the remains of Mark Butler, who was recently found dead with half his face shot away. Butler was a merchant in the Bublin district, Somerset county. Some weeks ago his store was robbed, and, for the purpose of intimidating any would-be robber, he, just prior to closing each evening fired off a gun. When, therefore, his body was found with a large amount of money in his pocket his death was regarded as accidental. Owing to late developments, however, the nature of which are unknown to the public, the authorities have concluded to make a full investigation.

The commencement exercises of the law dertment of the National University were neld last night at the Academy of Music and orty bright young lawyers were turned out to struggle against the mysterious and unsympathetic world

The hall was tastefully decorated, and every ent and possible space was occupied by the friends, relatives and sweethearts of the graduates.

After the rendition of a selection from the comic opera "The Isle of Champagne" and the march "National University Law School," especially composed for the class of graduates by the Marine band, Rev. William H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of House of Representatives, formally opened the graduation exercises by delivering the invocation. made the annual address to the young men who were to enter upon their uncertain professional future. Mr. Bryan's words were eminently fruitful to the young men in their calling, and were full of sentiments of hearty encouragement to the young barristers.

The degrees of the master and bachelor of law were conferred by Hon. Arthur McArthur, LL. D., the chancellor of the university. An amusing incident occurred at this point that was not down on the programme. When one of the graduates stepped to the front of the stage to receive his diploma, a wee small voice in the orchestra cried out, "Hello, papa!" This little score of recognition brought forth an avaianche of appliance from the audience and a deep, red blush on papa.

from the audience and a deep, red blush on papa.

Three sprightly pieces were played by the band, one of which, the "American Patrol," was enthusiastically applanded.

Vice President Stevenson presented the university medals to the successful contestants. Stepping upon the platform, Mr. Stevenson simply said: "The pleasing duty has been assigned to me to desorate these young men with these medals," and closed after a very brief but appreciated address. He regretted that the majority of the graduates were from the District of Columbia. He said that they were not all needed in this vicinity, and invited them to go west to Nebraska or Illinois, where there is need of just such lawyers. He wished them success in their glorious work, and bid them God-speed.

The university gold medal for the best past graduate examination was awarded to Robert P. Hains, of New Jersey, those receiving honnorable mention, J. H. Colweil, C. D. Judson, C. E. Riordon, C. M. NO NIGHT SESSIONS YET.

Republicans Will Consent to a Vote Sugar To-day.

An agreement was entered into late this afternoon between the leaders on the two sides of the Senate which will avoid the necessity for a night session at present. A vote is to be taken at 12 o'clock to-morrow on the sending ameadment to the sugar schedule, and the committee amendments are then to and the committee amendments are then to be voted upon without debate, and this vote is to be followed by taking up the tobaceo schedule, which comes next. Republicans say that the sugar question will be revived when the bill comes into the open Senate, it being now in Committee of the Whole.

TO-DAY THEY VOTE ON SUGAR

Senators Will Pinish That Important Schedule This Evening.

SPEECHES MADE YESTERDAY

Vest, Jones, Allison, and Teller and Others Discuss the Duty and the Bounty Provisions-Louisiana Senators Declare Their Satisfaction With Rates in the Bill.

The final vote will be taken on the sugar chedule to-day. That was decided at the close of yesterday's session of the Senate.

The tariff bill was taken up at the usual hour of 10.30 yesterday, when Senator Vest took up his question of Republican aid for the trust in 1890, when, he claimed seven-tenths of a cent a pound had been given the re-

Senators Allison and Manderson then followed with lengthy arguments against the proposed duty. Senator Allison said the duty was practically prohibitive; no amount of ingenuity could conceal that fact.

Mr. Jones (Dem., Ark.) replied to Mr. Allison. He maintained that Senators on the Republican side had persistently misrepresented the prices of raw and refined sugars in their calculations as to the protection accorded refined sugars by the duty of 40 per cent. ad valorem. When Mr. Allison took the difference between raw and refined sugar in New York to show that 40 per cent, would be equivalent to a differential of 46 cents a hundred in favor of refined, Mr. Jones said he was obviously had not been even mentioned in the Cabinet, and that he had had no conferences with the President regarding it.

The present outflow of gold is not regarded pound levied by the Mchiniey law on refined pound levied by the McKiniey law on refined sugar. Besides the 40 per cent, was levied not at New York, but at the place of purchase. Senator Jones then dwelt at some length on the necessity of protection against the German export bounty. He also dwelt on the McKinley bill duty on sugar, which he declared has taxed the people $23,000,000, all of which went into the pockets of the refiners.

Mr. Teller came in with a statement that in his belief the proposed tax on sugar was not a revenue duty, and that the trust was $50,000,000 water. It had paid, he said, 27 per cent on investment when other enterprises were in financial trouble.

Messrs, Blanchard and Caffery both defended the sugar duty as a revenue duty.

were in financial trouble.

Messrs, Blanchard and Caffery both defended the sugar duty as a revenue duty.

Mr. Hoar (Rep., Mass.) said he did not believe his constituents would understand the complicated mathematics of the sugar schedule, but they would understand that the party which promised them free raw material, free coal, fron ore, free sugar, etc., had betrayed New England by striking down their industries in order to build up those of the South. The discussion was continued by Messrs, Powers (Rep., Mont.) and Chandler (Rep., N. H.).

Mr. Jones then made a statement regarding the pending amendment to change the date of the repeal of the sugar bounty from July 1, 1894, to January 1, 1895.

The committee thought, he said, that Congress ought not to set aside a law granting bounties for sugar production while a crop was in process of making and maturing. For that reason they had reported the change of the date on which the schedule should go into effect. Next year's crop would be made under the new conditions. He did not believe that any such advantage as was suggested by Mr. Allison would accrue either to the sugar grower or the refiner from the change in the date.

Mr. Allison agreed with Mr. Jones that the receal of the bounty ought not to go into effect receal of the bounty ought not to go into effect presed of the bounty ought not to go into effect presed of the bounty ought not to go into effect presed of the bounty ought not to go into effect presed of the bounty ought not to go into effect presed of the bounty ought not to go into effect.

Mr. Allison agreed with Mr. Jones that the repeal of the bounty ought not to go into effect this year. He went further and believed it ought not to go into effect until 1905, when it should terminate under the law of 1890.

Mr. Aldrich said it was important that the country should never the said it was the property with the country when the said it was important that the and Address and it was important that the country should understand exactly what the proposed change in the date when this schedule should go into effect meant. The day this schedule went into effect, January I, 1895, the price of sugar to the consumers would advance 1½ cents a pound. Who would be benefited, he asked. Not the Treasury, for not one mill of receive a would result to the be benefited, he asked. Not the Treasury, for not one mill of revenue would result to the schedule for one year. Meantime the sugar-growers of Louisiana would obtain a gratuity of $10,000,000. Their crop would be harvested in November and December of the present year. It would be held until January, when they would get the benefit in selling it at the increased price. Having their licenses for the production of the sugar this year, they would also secure the two cents bounty. The change in the date on which this schedule was to go into effect was in fact a plain proposition to abstract $10,000,000 from the Treasury flor the benefit of the Louisiana planters. On the other hand, it would give planters. On the other hand, it would give the sugar refluers an opportunity to drag-net the world for six months and import every pound of free raw sugar that could be pur-chased. Then the price would go up. "Gen-tlemen," he exciaimed dramatically, turning toward the other side, "this is too big a price to pay for the votes necessary to pass this bill." On the other hand, it would give

Mr. Piatt (Rep., Conn.), who followed Mr. Aidrich, denounced in better and caustic words the surrender of the Democratic mawords the surrender of the Democratic ma-ority to the sugar trust. He read from Mr. Jones' testimony before the bribery com-mittee the statement that certain Senators had mittee the statement that certain Senators had insisted upon an ad valorem duty on raw and refined sugar. The Louisiana Senators did not want an ad valorem duty. The Senate should know, he declared, who the Senators were who had backed the pet project of the sugar frust—an ad valorem duty. What arguments did they make, what public interest did they subserve, in forcing upon the Senate and the country an amendment in favor of a trust that paid 66 per cent. Mr. Platt concluded at 5.50, and then, after Mr. Platt considered at 5.00, and then, are some sparring, Mr. Harris succeeded in ef-fecting an arrangement by which all the amendments to the sugar schedule should be voted upon to-day. In accordance with the notice he served last Saturday, he stated the notice he served inst Saturday, he stated that unless some agreement could be reached for facilitating the disposition of the measure he would be compelled to ask the Senate to sit longer and later. He asked that unanimous consent be given to vote on all the sugar amendments at an early hour to-day. Mr. Aldrich was disposed to agree to this, naming 1 o'clock as the hour. Mr. Harris, however, was inclined to demur. Three days, he said, had airendy been consumed in sugar, mostly in partisan debate.

Mr. Teller insisted that the sugar schedule was the most important as well as the most was the most important as well as the most indefensible schedule in the bitl. Mr. Manderson also repudiated the idea that there had been any attempt to waste time in the discussion of this important paragraph. The debate upon it had been most valuable and interesting, and upon it depended the fate of the bill.

Mr. Hoar suggested that it was too much to ask the Senate to vote without debate on all the amendments offered to the sugar schedule. He suggested that a vote be taken on the amendments to the bounty paragraph at 1 o'clock, and that then the debate on the other amendments be under the ten-minute rule, with the understanding that the entire schedule be disposed of to-day. This was finally agreed to, and at 6.10 the Senate, on Mr. Harris motion, went into executive session, and a few minutes later adjourned.
